When Sequim Community Church started the design of its new building, it began with the community in mind. Their multi-use building is used for a wide range of activities including; community events, youth events, concerts and a weekly contemporary worship service, which includes drama productions, video presentations, practical messages and inspiring music.

The fastest growing church on the Olympic Peninsula, Sequim Community Church has a passion for reaching its community. The exploding growth led Senior Pastor Scott Koenigsaecker to explore new worship facility options and other facility needs of the church. The research of such needs brought a consensus that not only was additional worship space needed, but there were other space issues that needed to be addressed. SCC has an established congregation among Sequim's large retirement community, but are also very outreach oriented and have been extremely successful at reaching younger families and youth.

A contemporary worship facility was needed for the growing church, but a facilities assessment also raised the awareness of a need for additional space capable of handling large recreation activities, performing arts, and other multi-purpose uses.

Quotes

"Nobody can do it all like CCI, they're the best. Their expertise and experience helped my staff focus on the ongoing ministry and not get bogged down with any further details of this building project. They knew exactly what we wanted and how work within our budget."

"When we go to build our next building, there's no doubt about which direction we're going. Based on our experience and what we continue to hear, we're partnering with up with CCI."

"It was very helpful when CCI was able to take such complex equipment and teach my volunteer tech crew how to use it." It's one thing to have such incredible equipment; It's another thing to actually use its capabilities."
